MICT is Here to Stay

Col Hamel

When I first heard the term "MICT," I thought it referred to some new refreshing summer beverage from a large fast-food chain. I quickly learned, however, that MICT stands for Management Internal Control Toolset. According to AFI 90-201, "MICT is an Air Force program of record

used by Airmen to accomplish self-assessment of program management and compliance with higher headquarters directives."

MICT provides visibility and oversight to virtually everyone in the Air Force from squadron commanders to the Secretary of the Air Force. It consists of self-inspection checklists containing compliance requirements from AFIs and other regulatory publications. They are designed to allow airmen to answer questions relating to the status of their programs. It is vital that the answers are accurate and truly reflect the current status of the program at all times. It is far more important that the questions are answered honestly and accurately than the program be fully compliant. Without accurate and timely information, commanders will not have the data needed to make informed decisions, and unseen shortfalls may exist that adversely affect unit readiness.

MICT is here to stay. It is a powerful tool to help leaders at all levels make good decisions and allocate scarce resources more efficiently. As an important member of the Rhode Warrior Team, your active participation in this important process is vital to the success of the Wing both now and into the future.

AIRMAN SPOTLIGHT... SSgt Lauren Forrest

143d Medical Group

By: Tech. Sgt. Arthur DesLauriers and Tech. Sgt. Jason Long
143d Airlift Wing, Public Affairs

Rank/ First & Last Name:

Staff Sgt Lauren Forrest

Squadron:

143d Medical Group (MDG)

Duty Title:

Non-Commissioned Officer in Charge (NCOIC) of Immunizations

Family's Military Heritage:

Both my father and uncle were in the Air Force. My dad was a mechanic.

What is your mission here?

My mission is to train the Airmen of the 143d Medical Group to ensure the RIANG immunization program is on point.

What are some of the best parts of your mission?

The people - working with and training Airmen. Overall, working with the people here is the best part of the mission.

What are some of the challenges you face while conducting your mission and how do you overcome them?

Obtaining the certifications is very time consuming and demanding.

Why did you join the Rhode Island Air National Guard?

I have several family members who served in the armed forces and wanted to keep that tradition alive. I was originally in the Navy Reserves and switched to the Air Force Reserves. I decided to keep on moving up and transferred to the 143d AW.

What is your civilian occupation?

I am a Lieutenant in the Weymouth Massachusetts Fire Department.

How does your civilian occupation and guard job complement each other?

I have certifications and training for my civilian that assist in the medical field. Some of the training and certifications I have received in the military have assisted me in my civilian career as a fire fighter.

Each month the 143d AW Public Affairs Office will identify and interview an Airman from within the 143d AW for the Airman Spotlight. To nominate one of your Airmen (Enlisted or Officer) please contact the PA office at 143aw.pa@ang.af.mil

143RD Medical Group Fetal Protection Program

The health of the pregnant female and her unborn child is of critical importance. In order for the 143d MDG Public Health office to ensure the safety of both the pregnant female and her unborn child, and meet the requirements of both AFI 44-102 (Medical Care Management) and AFI 36-2905 (Fitness Program) the following process needs to be followed.

1. All pregnancies are to be reported to Public Health as soon as possible.
2. The member needs to pick up a letter from Public Health that the members OB/GYN doctor will complete and return to the 143d Public Health office.
3. A workplace interview is completed by the member and certified by her supervisor. Public Health and Bioenvironmental then assess workplace hazards for fetal risk.
4. Each pregnant member will receive educational materials on pregnancy and the hazards that may affect a pregnancy.
5. A profile is then created with restrictions recommended by the members OB/GYN and the military which is then reviewed by a military health care provider.

Six weeks prior to the estimated due date and six weeks after resolution the female will not be allowed to perform military duty. Additional concerns are addressed through Public Health at the time the member reports to Public Health. This will include exemption from the fitness assessment program, restrictions involving the wear of chemical gear, and exemptions from vaccinations.

After the pregnancy and prior to the member returning to work on base a Post Pregnancy letter (acquired through Public Health) needs to be turned into the Public Health office.
